

Tore Nordenstam :

EMPIRICISM AND THE ANALYTIC - SYNTHETIC DISTINCTION.

Licentiatavhandling i teoretisk filosofi vid Göteborgs universitet vårterminen 1961.

Contents:

Introduction.....	p. 1
1. The epistemological setting.....	p. 4
1.0 Aim of the chapter	p. 4
1.1 The principle of analyticity.....	p. 4
1.2 Gradualism.....	p. 7
1.3 Two qualifications.....	p.10
1.4 The principle of empiricism.....	p.11
1.5 Gradualism and the principle of empiricism.....	p.14
1.6 Neo-pragmatism.....	p.19
1.7 Recapitulation.....	p.23
2. The attack on the analytic - synthetic distinction.....	p.25
2.0.Aim of the chapter.....	p.25
2.1.The Critique of the standard definitions.....	p.25
2.2.Demands on clarifications of intensional terms.....	p.36
2.3.Recapitulation.....	p.40
3. Meaning, synonymy, and analyticity in natural languages..	p.42
3.0.Aim of the chapter.....	p.42
3.1.The existence of the analytic-synthetic distinction..	p.42
3.2.Synonymy : Goodman's explication.....	p.51
3.3.Quine's characterization of logical truth.....	p.60
3.4.On logical constants in natural language.....	p.66
3.5.The limitations of strict analyticity.....	p.75
3.6.Concluding remarks.....	p.81
3.7.Recapitulation.....	p.83
4. The artificial language approach.....	p.85
4.0.Aim of the chapter.....	p.85
4.1.Natural and artificial languages.....	p.85
4.2.Some objections to the artificial language approach..	p.87
4.3.Concluding remarks.....	p.92
4.4.Recapitulation.....	p.93
References.....	p.95